About Me

I'm a junior Fullstack Developer with a solid theoretical background gained during three years of study in "Web Applications and Databases." Although I decided to leave university in my third year, the academic knowledge and projects I completed give me an advantage over candidates without formal education. What sets me apart is my creative mindset, unconventional approach to problem-solving, and strong motivation to learn new technologies. My goal is to gain my first professional experience as a Fullstack or Frontend Developer and continue growing in web and mobile application development.
